[1] Note that these metrics are collected from the official websites and other reputable sources. This section takes each company at their word. It's up to the user to decide who is trustworthy.

[2] E-mail address, first or last name, and/or device info are stored either during sign-up or in the course of using the service.

[3] Some services limit the bandwidth of the user. When a company's privacy policy explicitly states no bandwidth usage logging, you can be more sure they're serious and don't have an invisible, unadvertised cap.

[4] There are many causes and organizations one can support to defend privacy rights. Even though some companies may not financially support the EFF specifically, many still support good causes and are to be commended.

[5] Note that not all companies use effective warrant canaries. A "yes" in this field does not guarantee quality, only that they claim to have a system in place. Please research the details for yourself. Also note that there is some debate as to the effectiveness of a warrant canary between experts.

[6] A "Some" in this field means that the companies' support team may be willing to whitelist your E-Mail providers SMTP server upon request. Another possibility is the company supports some workaround method.

[7] Services marked as blocking "Some" P2P, usually only blocks it on servers dedicated for streaming. Other possibilities are that P2P user is throttled - or worse banned. The user is responsible for researching further based on their needs.

[8] Not all tools listed here are mandatory. Often a tool is used for optional newsletters or in house communication. Field marked yellow are optional. The user must research based on their privacy needs.

[9] A 10 in this field actually indicates no advertised limit for simultaneous connections. (Done this way for conditional formatting purposes only)

[10] Note that some companies report physical server count, and some report potential virtual server count (to inflate the numbers). Do your own research on a case by case basis if this is an important metric for you.

[11] Pricing varies by server connected to. Rates change over time depending on server utilization. Pricing model designed for minimal VPN use.

[12] Cryptostorm has something called a "Seppuku Pledge" which is a declaration to governments and users that they will not cooperate with secret court orders and would rather shutter their business in such an event. This is admirable and deserves recognition, however, it's ultimately words - and no words, no matter how strong will serve as a system to warn a user that their privacy is likely compromised.

[13] The official HideMyAss website shows that they have servers in 221 countries, (there are less than 200 countries in the world). I questioned "Nemo" using the live chat support tool on the site, and discovered that they're counting individual states as their own countries to inflate the number. I have removed this figure for now as they are not using comparable figures to other services. If someone from the company wishes to correct this with the proper number, please feel free to comment, and I will work with you to sort it out.

[14] Integrity.st is a new service and appears to still be developing their pricing model.

[15] Kopard allows 2 simultaneous connections at one time, however only one to a server.

[16] ProXPN allows a number of simultaneous connections equal to the number of clusters on their network, however only one to each. This means that you are technically allowed multiple connections, but only one to the nearest server where you would likely get the best ping.

[17] Riseup accepts donations in lieu of a normal subscription fee. They recommend $5-15 per month as a fair donation.

[18] Viking VPN allows a number of simultaneous connections equal to the number of clusters on their network, however only one to each. This means that you are technically allowed multiple connections, but only one to the nearest server where you would likely get the best ping.
